Michael Eyraud Pays the Death Penalty for Murder.

HE IS BEHEADED IN PARIS.

A Horrible Crime Legally Avenged—The Murderer Refuses Religious Consolation and Dies Like a Beast—Other Foreign News.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Michael Eyraud, the murderer of Gouffe, was executed at [illegible] yesterday morning on the [illegible] Roquette. Eyraud met his [illegible] with calmness and resignation. [illegible] but few witnesses at the execution, owing to the fact that it was not generally known that the famous [illegible] was to meet death yesterday. [illegible] of the prison La Roquette, the prison chaplain, L'Abbe Faure, [illegible] entered in Eyraud's cell [illegible] previous to the hour fixed for the condemned man's execution, [illegible] that he was already up and [illegible] evidently forewarned, contrary to [illegible] rules, by some kind-hearted official.

[illegible] declined a glass of cognac [illegible] was tendered him by one of the [illegible] and, in spite of the earnest [illegible] of L'Abbe Faure, the murderer positively, even angrily refused to [illegible] the priest's prayers, to pray himself or to have any religious rites performed in his behalf. The abbe's plea [illegible] the criminal in that dark cell yesterday morning, while within and [illegible] the prison all preparations were [illegible] to usher the sullen prisoner into [illegible] world was probably the most [illegible] and dramatic incident of the execution. But Eyraud's iron will was not to be shaken even in the presence of [illegible] and he continued impatiently to [illegible] religious consolation while on the [illegible] march to the guillotine.

When pinioned and on the point of being overturned upon the bascule of the guillotine—upon the plank which was to [illegible] with him beneath the fatal suspended knife—Eyraud with a movement as if of angry contempt or sullen resentment refused to return the last kiss bestowed upon him by L'Abbe Faure as customary in the case of criminals upon the point of being executed.

The action of the guillotine, once was Eyraud's neck well beneath the uprights, was instantaneous. There was a flash and all was over. Eyraud's head had fallen into the sawdust-filled receptacle [illegible] awaited. Then followed the [illegible] and the body of Gouffe's murderer was handed over to his [illegible] relatives and acquaintances.

The crime for which Michael Eyraud suffered death by the guillotine consisted in his having in Paris, in July, 1889, and with the assistance of his mistress, Gabrielle Bompard, strangled to death [illegible] Gouffe.

After the commission of the crime, the body of the victim was conveyed in a trunk to Millery, in the department of [illegible], and deposited in a thicket, where on Aug. 13, 1889, it was discovered in a state of decomposition.

In [illegible] of the following year, Gabrielle Bompard made the confession to the Parisian police which led to her arrest and imprisonment, and finally, after a most exciting chase, to the capture in Havana of the strangler [illegible], who was brought back to [illegible] for trial.

The most remarkable feature in the sensational legal proceedings which culminated in the sentencing to death of Eyraud and to twenty years' imprisonment at hard labor of Gabrielle was the [illegible] attempt of the counsel for [illegible] woman to prove that in [illegible] murder she acted her part while [illegible] control of hypnotic influence exercised by Eyraud.

RAGING BLIZZARD.

The Mercury Falls to 46 Degrees Below Zero in the Northwest.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 4.—The cold wave still prevails with unabated rigor over the northwest, though there has been a decided moderation over Montana and both Dakotas, where there has been a rise of from 10 to 32 degrees in temperature since yesterday morning, but in Minnesota and Manitoba there has been a fall of from 5 to 10 degrees.

The coldest reported yesterday morning, was 46 below zero from Minnedosa, Manitoba. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning the line of temperature passed the upper portion of Lake Huron, thence over the upper part of lower Michigan, continuing southwestward through southeastern Wisconsin and northern Illinois, it dipped rather abruptly southward to about fifty miles below Keokuk, Iowa, thence it passed northwestward through south Dakota and over middle Montana nearly to the international boundary line. From there it rounded back through Helena, Mont.

Over the extensive area north of that line the temperature at that hour mentioned above ranged from zero to 46 degrees below zero. The mercury was 25 below all day at Neche, N. Dak. This city has had it no higher than 2 degrees below, and at 8 o'clock the mercury is still down below.

Word, to whose official and private character Mr. Jones alluded before a large audience in the severest and most pointed terms. The mayor was absent from the city at the time. The announcement that Jones would be here again to deliver a lecture caused excitement. Mr. Jones arrived Monday night and the lecture was delivered.

At the station yesterday morning, just before the Evangelist took a train for the west, Mayor Word attacked him with a cane. In the struggle the cane changed hands, and the mayor received several blows. Heavy bruises were inflicted and both bleed profusely. In a few minutes the train pulled out of the station with Sam Jones on board. Mayor Word was subsequently arrested and placed under bonds for aggravated assault and for carrying a pistol.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 4.—The legislative committee, to make inquiry into the cause leading to the Mammoth mine disaster, with a view to a thorough revision of the state mine laws, concluded their labor yesterday and departed for Harrisburg.

All the testimony presented shows conclusively that Fire Boss William Smith, who was among the victims of the calamity, was derelict in his official duties, as he was addicted to a liberal use of intoxicating liquors. The officials of the company disclaim any knowledge of his bad habits. The testimony of many of the witnesses that the mine was in a gaseous state caused no surprise. But the company is not responsible for this condition, as they utilized every precaution and made every conceivable improvement.

Canfield, the self-confessed murderer of little Nellie Griffin, near Dimondale, Friday last, was brought into the circuit court at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and arraigned before Judge Hooker for feloniously and willfully, and with malice aforethought, choking and killing Nellie Griffin. When asked by the court what he had to say to the charge, he replied: "Guilty, I expect."

PURCHASING CARTRIDGES.

Kansas City Dealers to Furnish Ammunition for Guatemalan Soldiers.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 4.—A Kansas City special to The Post-Dispatch says: In the past few days all the gun stores in the city have been making figures on 5,000 boxes of 45 calibre cartridges, in view of a prospective purchaser, who turns out to be Maj. Charles MacNamara, an ex-Fenian officer, who, with Capt. Charles Waters and Capt. Thomas Phelan, recently proposed raising troops for Guatemala.

Maj. MacNamara said yesterday morning that he was acting under instructions from New York, the cartridges being cheaper here. He says further that Maj. M. Belt, Gen. Barrundia's private secretary, was in this city at one time during the Guatemalan trouble, on looking for men, who, in an emergency, could be called upon to aid his government. Hence, Phelan, MacNamara and Waters formed a triangle, and stood ready to raise men and arms. The sudden termination of the rebellion ended the arrangements.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

An Illinois Farmer Attempts to Kill His Sister-in-Law and Then Suicides.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 4.—Reports of a double tragedy at Smithton, Ill., yesterday morning, have just reached here. From what can be learned so far, it appears that Henry Betchtold, a farmer living near Smithton, discharged the contents of a shotgun at his sister-in-law, striking her in the leg.

His intention appears to have been to kill her, as when he saw that the shot had not produced fatal wounds, he clutched the weapon and struck her on the head with the butt end, inflicting injuries which will probably result in death. After re-loading the weapon he placed the muzzle under his chin and pulled the trigger. The entire charge took effect.

Business Buildings Burned.

WINCHESTER, O., Feb. 4.—Almost the entire business part of this city was destroyed by fire at 2 a. m. The property destroyed consisted of the furniture and undertaking establishment of J. H. Bradford, residence of A. L. Robbins, barber shop, residence and millinery store of Mrs. Alice Ball, dental office of Dr. J. W. Blair, law office of T. C. Downey, medical office of Dr. C. S. Carboy, a portion of W. A. Grossman's hardware establishment, and the Palace drug store. Total loss $10,000, half of which is covered by insurance in the Phenix of Hartford, Ohio of Dayton, and Royal of Liverpool. Supposed to have been incendiarism.

Shot by an Officer.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 4.—"Duge" Burke, a notorious local lawbreaker, was shot and killed on Second street yesterday afternoon while resisting arrest. Burke escaped from the work house Monday, where he was serving a sentence of one year. Hollare Chenot, a guard, met him on the street yesterday and tried to arrest him. Burke attempted to strike the officer and was shot through the head.

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency, altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY [illegible]

THE WAIL OF A HYPOCRITE.

We have been treated unjustly [illegible] of the democratic officials of [illegible] several years past, but we have not [illegible] this the cause of furious attacks upon them. We have criticised their [illegible] actions when we thought they needed it without first calculating the cost. When they withheld official advertising from us they withheld information from the bulk of the Republican party which the law designed they should have. We have never assailed them personally for so doing, though they disregarded a plain provision of the law when acting as they did, but we do not believe in exposing our sore toe to the public view quite so plainly as do those who are "Republican for revenue." We have lost hundreds of dollars of public patronage because we do not run a Republican paper "for revenue," but for principle. —Independent.

This is refreshing, it is charming, it is exhilarating. It is one of the venerable Mr. Crawford's Sunday school efforts, in which he reiterates to the Republicans that he is their savior and at the same time palavers for the county printing as it came in the good old days when the public teat was pulled by the organ without annoyance from revenue papers. "Criticised without calculating cost?" That is good—it is immense. When, and to what extent? Give us the date, that is since there has been another channel through which to place county advertising.

Of course county advertising placed in the STAR "withholds information from the bulk of the republican party which the law designed they should have." This is a corker. When did you take to handling Marion county Republicans in the "bulk?" What constitutes the "bulk?" Is "bulk" a new term for the ring, and does it mean the same gang of bosses who want to run the party in this county to gratify personal ends, and are so running it until the annual question is "How much will the democratic majority be increased this fall?" And, speaking of the designs of the law, tell us what you think about the Commissioners' Report. Is it as the law designs when it says a detailed report? Republican for revenue, eh? Well, dear Mr. Crawford, what are you editing a republican paper for? We beseech thee, reverend manipulator of the republican calliope, tell us why you persist in wearying a ponderous brain and spreading scant chunks of fossilized thoughts before a wearied subscription list, if it is not for revenue? Bah! your wails about principles and revenue are hypocrisy of the rankest kind.

Now a word as to the STAR's attitude toward the county commissioners. We are shedding just a little light on their official work as a refreshing pastime in a dull newspaper season, and it is surprising what an interest it awakens. The refusal to throw an annual plum into our back yard is not in itself the trouble, but we grew weary of being deceived. Heretofore we have been guilty of the weakness of all other Marion newspapers, have submitted to outrageous treatment at the commissioners' hands and kept silent as to their official shortcomings because of the favors in their hands. There isn't enough in it to continue such a course—it is too small a reward for the curtailment of newspaper freedom—especially when the reward seldom materializes. The newspapers here have had their bills cut one third, without reason or explanation, and yet they have submitted, so did we, without public protest, because there was printing still to come. Publishers have roasted the commissioners in private talks, roasted hard enough to phaze even Mr. Loyer had he heard it—but all have feared to be open with their griefs. The STAR doesn't propose to further salute that august and incompetent board with a patronizing air to its face and a private cussing behind its back. There is no politics in it. The fact is well known that the office of commissioner is the great important one of all in the county. It is also a notorious fact that it is the most incompetently filled. The idea that the commissioner must be a farmer—without business qualifications—is an error and a costly one. The board of commissioners should be made up of competent business men, from farm or city, qualification, instead of hay seed being the gauge in [illegible]. If our occasional paragraphs will impress the taxpayers with [illegible], regardless of parties, [illegible] some good.

The Record most heartily welcomes Mr. LaTourette to our town and assures him a warm welcome from our people, who feel that just such wide-awake, experienced and progressive men as he are greatly needed here, and also feel that in selecting London he has made no possible mistake as the great marble, lime, brick, lumber, coal and other interests will abundantly pay him for his capital and experience invested. Coupled with these business interests is the fact that a healthier location cannot be found in the United States.

For years past Mr. LaTourette has been prominently identified with the manufacturing interests of Marion, Ohio, and largely through his efforts the town has grown in a short time from 2,000 to 10,000 inhabitants.

Has Not Retired as Yet.

His friends here have been anxious to know whether Bob Allen would retire from the ball field. The following from Tuesday's Commercial Gazette gives his position:

In yesterday's issue of the Commercial Gazette there was an interview with President Reach, of the Philadelphia Club, in which he said that Short Stop Allen would probably retire from base ball, now that he is married. The following dispatch was received from the brilliant infielder of last year's Philadelphia team: To the Editor of the Commercial Gazette.

"I have seen it stated several times, especially in interview with Mr. Reach in yesterday's Commercial Gazette, that I intended to retire from base ball. No one had authority to make such a statement. The difference between the Philadelphia Club and myself has been a matter of salary.

Home Rule [illegible]

A 4 year old [illegible] my, lived not [illegible] on one of the numerous east end streets, which we will designate by the name of Mud.

Multitudes of east enders will recognize their own avenue under this name—that is, if they dig deep enough to reach it.

Later Jimmy's parents moved to a paved street, and his mamma gave him this little lecture:

"Now, Jimmy, you must not get yourself all muddied up as you used to. We live on an asphalt street now, and you have no excuse for not keeping clean."

Soon after this Jimmy was playing near his new home with some bad boys, and he picked up a profane word or two.

On making use of these words in the presence of his mamma he was severely reprimanded, whereupon he inquired:

"Can't a fellow even talk on an asphalt street?"—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"In tendering his resignation he said he could do better in private employment at $1.25 than as a government workman at twice that amount. What with political assessments, entertaining his party friends, purchase of tickets of one kind and another, and other pulls on his purse, he found little of his wages left for family expenses. I, of course, accepted his resignation, at the same time jocularly informing him that he ought to be exhibited in a dime museum."—New York Star.

Strange Lapse of Memory.

Cases of forgetfulness on matters of interest are on record. While Dr. Priestley was preparing his work entitled "Harmony of the Gospels," he had taken great pains to inform himself on a subject which had been under discussion relative to the Jewish Passover. He wrote out the result of his researches and laid the paper away. His attention and time being taken with something else, some little time elapsed before the subject occurred to him again. Then the same time and pains were given to the subject that had been given to it before, and the results were again put on paper and laid aside. He completely had he forgotten that he had copied the same paragraphs and reflections before, that it was only when he had found the papers on which he had [illegible] them that it was recalled to his recollection. This same author [illegible] recently read his own published work [illegible] and did not recognize them.—Boston Herald.

PROGRESS OF RAPID TRANSIT.

Statistics Prove That the Horse Is Fast Losing Its Usefulness.

At the convention of the American Street Railway association at Buffalo, in many ways one of the most important gatherings of the kind ever held in this country, [illegible] stated the [illegible] which had been made [illegible] in [illegible] He added [illegible] that the United States government had recognized [illegible] the importance of city passenger [illegible] in its census of 1890 [illegible] a report on street railways in cities of over [illegible] inhabitants.

In this report [illegible] cities are included, and out of a total of 3,150 miles of track [illegible] are operated by horses, [illegible] miles by electricity, [illegible] by cable and [illegible] miles by steam. In the smaller cities electricity is [illegible] rapidly adopted, and there are already in operation in cities and towns under 5,000 inhabitants about 1,0[illegible] miles of electric street railway. Mr. Lowry added:

I am so thoroughly convinced that electricity is the coming power for street railways, except heavy grade, where the cable is best suited, and that it will prove effective as a means of rapid transit in cities, that I believe this is the last convention that will ever seriously consider horses for the operation of street railways. When the people of a city clearly understand the great benefits of rapid transit by electricity or other improved motive power over horses, they will demand that their city authorities grant such rights as will enable street railway companies to operate by the most improved methods.

Heretofore street railway securities have been looked upon with favor by the financial world. However, since they have been operated by electricity, the financial men of the country are looking to its development and application to street railways as an additional reliable security for the investment of savings and trust funds. This should encourage street railway companies to give their various cities the most improved and best possible service. They will not only please their patrons, but the investment will prove very profitable. If street railway companies do this no better security can be offered for the savings of the widow and orphan than a good street railway bond in a thriving city.

People have not yet begun to realize what an immensely important factor the increase of speed in city travel may become. It has been found that increasing the speed of the cars a given percentage inevitably increases the patronage in nearly the same ratio, while the operating expenses are increased by a very small fraction of this percentage.

An instance of this has occurred at Davenport, Ia., where it has been found, taking the record for one year, that the total expense of operating five horse cars was $10,540, while five electric cars cost $11,270 to operate during the same time, or it cost to operate the same number of cars 3 1-2 per cent. more by electricity than by horses. The gross earnings for the twelve months of the same equipments were, horses $15,847, electricity $23,673.

It will thus be seen that although the operating expenses were increased 3 1-2 per cent. where electricity was used, the earnings were increased very nearly 50 per cent., or in other words the substitution of electricity resulted in a net gain of more than 46 per cent., owing to the increased patronage induced by the improved service.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

French Cookery in 1578.

"The French," writes the Venetian embassador in 1578, "never spend money so willingly as when they are purchasing food, and making what they term bonne chere. This is the reason why butchers, restaurateurs, pastry cooks and tavern keepers abound. There is not a street in which you do not find them. Would you purchase meat, either dead or alive? You can do so at any moment. Do you wish your provisions to be sent in dressed? The cooks and pastry cooks, in less than an hour, will furnish you with a dinner or a supper for ten, for twenty or even for a hundred persons.

"The rotisseur provides the meat, the pastry cook the pies, tarts, entrees and desserts; the confectioner contributes the jellies, sauces and ragouts. The art of gastronomy is so far advanced in Paris that you can order a dinner at any price, from a teston to a crown, or from one crown to twenty crowns. For this latter sum I verily believe you could obtain manna soup or roast phenix, or whatever is most precious in the world."—All the Year Round.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

CAME BACK AFTER DEATH

Here's a Ghost That Evidently Liked Work Connected With a Drug Store.

A curious thing is said to have hap- pened at Crossen, Silesia, in the year 1659. In the spring of that year one Christopher M[illegible], a drug clerk or apothecary's servant, as the old account says, died and was buried with the usual [illegible] of his church. A few days after his death a shadow exactly like him in [illegible] appeared in the [illegible] where he had been employed before his decease. In the shop he would walk about, sit himself down, take boxes, pots, glasses, etc., from the shelves, always returning them to their proper places.

Later on he began to try the quality of the medicines and to weigh various drug stuffs in a pair of scales used for that purpose; would pound drugs in a mortar with a [illegible] noise, and even serve people who came in [illegible] to the shop; in a word, do all that a servant in such a capacity could do. He looked very grimly upon those who had formerly been his fellow servants, they being afraid to say anything to him. The owner of the drug shop was sick at the time, and this phantom servant soon began to cause him a deal of trouble, performing all sorts of tricks on the in- valid, such as pulling down the bed upon which he lay, turning sheets, coverlets, etc., and at one time even going so far as to throw the lamps in the fire as often as they were brought into the sickroom.

During all this time he had never been seen in the streets or heard to speak. Finally, one day he put on a cloak that hung in the shop and walked out into the street, making no one and turning neither to the right nor to the left. Nearing the churchyard where his mortal remains had been deposited, he met a maid servant with whom he had formerly been on speaking terms; ac- costed her, only to see her fall in a swoon. This single instance is the only one in which he is said to have spoken during the six weeks he was ter- rorizing all that portion of Silesia. When the girl fainted the gallant phantom essayed to help her to her feet, and placed in her hand a paper written in blood red ink telling the location of much buried treasure. That night Prin- cess Elizabeth Charlotte, the then chief magistrate of Crossen, determined to put an end to the ghostly raids of the drug clerk. She ordered the grave opened, and the corpse, grave clothes and the coffin burned.

This weird proceeding was carried out to the letter, and nothing of the ghost clerk was ever seen afterward, although exact pictures of him appeared in every window pane in the drug shop building. Some of these pictures, which much re- sembled sand blast work, faded in a few months, but two of them, in an attic window where the clerk lived prior to his death, were plain to be seen up to the time the building was destroyed by fire in 1741. No explanation of these mysterious shadows has ever been given.—St. Louis Republic.

Cats Enjoy Fun.

The sportiveness of kittens is exuber- ant and makes them the most delightful of pets. Lindsay's remark is superfluous, except that it has to be made for the formal completeness of his treatise that dogs and cats take part in the fun and frolic—sometimes rough and boisterous enough—of their child playfellows. They give every evidence, in fact, that such fun and frolic are the most enjoyed features of that period of their lives. As the animal matures it becomes more sedate, and even assumes a meditative air, but the [illegible] for sport does not die out till infirmity begins to wear upon it.

A cat [illegible] in The Animal World would allow itself to be rolled up or swung about in a tablecloth, and [illegible] the fun, and Wood's dog [illegible] would let his friends do anything they pleased with him—lift him up by any part of the body, toss him in the air from one to another, use him as a football or pillow, make him jump over their hands or leap on their shoulders, or walk along their ex- tended arms with perfect complacency. At the same time he was keenly sensi- tive to ridicule, and [illegible] that would walk off with every mark of offended dignity.—W. H. Larrabee in Popular Science.

The Shortstop.

The baseball field is not the place where one looks for literary wit, yet now and then it happens that a good put saying is heard there which shows not only readiness but familiarity with lit- erature.

It was on an occasion when a college nine was playing the nine from a [illegible] school, and the shortstop on the [illegible] was an absurdly tall and thin fellow named Brown, apparently [illegible] years older than the boys with whom he was associated. He played very lazily, muffing and fumbling, until it was sug- gested that he was only put on the [illegible] for the joke of having so long a man as shortstop.

"He is like the Ancient Mariner," [illegible] of the college men, "he is long and lank and Brown."

Character at the Table.

At a grand hotel in Italy [illegible] had arrived who made a great display of wealth, and of whom none could learn anything. At the table d'hote [illegible] helped himself to an olive with his fork, it was decided he was only a com- mon plebeian, for olives are handled only with the fingers among civilized people throughout Christendom. Table man- ners at many of our best hotels in our principal cities invariably shock the sensibilities of those accustomed to the graces of polite society. It is conceded that there is an exhilaration in the at- mosphere of Paris, of Vienna and of Berlin that draws out any [illegible] one may have in his or her nature and elevates to a higher plane than ever be- fore experienced.—Cor. Boston Tran- script.

Abuse of the Dog.

I was on a steamer going to Norfolk. I had a young Laverack gyp, which I consigned to a waiter to take care of for me. That night just before retiring I hunted her out and found her tied to a block at the extreme bow of the steamer, right between the two hawser holes, through which the anchor chains run. The orifice was as large as a stovepipe, and as it was blowing a gale outside, a current of air as strong as that of a blast furnace rushed in and blew every hair of the dog upright. The poor brute [illegible] actually numb, and I am certain she would have died that night had I not rescued her and placed her in a sheltered warm spot.—Week's Sport.

Cupid vs. Clothes.

When Elizabeth held the fort in Eng- land, and Sir Walter Raleigh used to go about with rebuses on them if he had got hard up he could have gone around to his uncle's and put them up for thou- sands of pounds, not to mention a cer- tain pair of shoes of his which were said to be worth 6,600 crowns, then it be- came the fashion for a man who was in love to neglect his apparel, as if he were too much occupied to bother about such trifles.

There was one mark in particular— his garters were not to be tied. So that when an Elizabethan dude walked down the Mall with these useful appendages hanging on behind him it was equiva- lent to saying that his heart was gone. Here we have Shakespeare in "As You Like It" putting these words into the mouth of fair Rosalind, "There is none of my uncle's marks upon you; he taught me how to know a man in love. Then your hose should be ungarted, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeves un- buttoned, your shoes untied, and every- thing about you denoting a careless des- olation."—Clothier and Furnisher.

The Personal Pronoun in Conversation.

The inordinate employment of the possessive case is a vulgar solecism, and not used to excess by those of gentle breeding. There are both men and wo- men who are forever talking about "my carriage," "my house," etc., until they disgust their hearers. One is apt to im- agine that such persons are the possessors of newly acquired wealth and its appur- tenances, when this small, two lettered word slips from their lips with unseem- ing frequency.

The pronoun "I" should not be too often repeated, as it gives too personal and egotistic a turn to conversation, and the frequent recurrence of "I said so and so," and "I did so and so," reveals a nat- ure weighed down with a sense of its own importance, and caring little about what other people are doing or thinking. —Jenness-Miller Magazine.

People Who Eat Alone.

In all the really civilized countries the members of a family and their guests partake of meals while collected around a central board, but this is not so with the majority or even a fraction of the semi-civilized and barbarous nations. The Marquesan islanders dine alone, re- tiring to the most secret parts of their huts for the purpose of eating their food. This custom probably arose among them in an early period of their history for fear, perhaps, that another with equally as sharp an appetite and more bodily strength would deprive the feaster of his meal.—St. Louis Republic.

Declaration of War Not Necessary.

Wars are often engaged in without any set declaration. This is the case in Europe, and has been so here. The Unit- ed States made a pronunciamento of this sort when it entered into the contest with Great Britain in 1812, but no such formality was observed by us in the con- test with Mexico or in the civil struggle of 1861-5. In each case the government recognized that a state of war existed and acted accordingly.—St. Louis Globe- Democrat.

Canine Intelligence.

One of the intelligent dogs lives in Bar Harbor, Me. He was carrying a paper the other day when several canine com- panions began to bother him. He put the paper down on the ground, and when a dog attempted to touch it sprang on him and gave him a good shaking. These tactics he repeated several times, till at last he could not get any dog to touch the paper, and then he quickly picked it up and walked away.—Kennebec Jour- nal.

A "Hello!" Raise.

GOT IN HIS WORK.

The Thin Man Tried to be Friendly, but It Was No Use.

He looked so big and morose and gruff as he sat in the waiting room of the Pennsyl- vania depot across the river that all other passengers kept clear of him. All but one. He was a tall, thin man, with a piping voice and scant eyebrows, and he carried in his hand a thin, cadaverous valise. He sized the big man up from afar, and then walked over and stood straight up before him and asked:

"Can you explain why the moon should influence the tides in the way it does?"

"Who are you talking to?" demanded the big man in a voice so deep that it seemed to have come out of the basement.

"To you, of course!"

"Well, you dust along! I want nothing to do with you!"

"You don't? That's singular. I have always been looked upon as a companion- able person by everybody. Have you ever figured on what quantity of water is evap- orated from the Atlantic ocean each year?"

"Didn't I tell you to go?" growled the big man. "I don't want anybody to talk to me!"

"You don't? I wouldn't have believed it. Perhaps you have met with a loss— death of some dear friend? If so, you have my heartfelt sympathy. Speaking of death reminds me of the heavens and astronomy. Do you know how long it would take a cannon ball, speeding at the rate of thirty- three yards a second, to reach the moon?"

"Look a-here, old man, I'll break you in two if you don't move on!" shouted the big man as he sat up straight.

"I declare! But you are the most touchy person I've met in ten years. You don't seem to want to get acquainted. I ain't mad, however, and I wanted to inquire if you had any idea of the strength of an alli- gator's jaws? Recent experiments made by a reliable naturalist have shown"——

"Hang it, but I'll knock you through that wall!" savagely roared the big man, as he hauled off to deliver a blow.

"Oh, well, if you don't want to be friend- ly I shan't humble myself," replied the thin man, as he dodged and retreated around a bench. "I did hope to find in you a kindred spirit, but I am disappoint- ed. Your last observation is conclusive proof that you are not up on even natural philosophy. Fired from a certain distance, with an extra charge of powder, a tallow candle may be driven through an oak plank, but when you come to talk of knocking a human body through a brick wall you betray your ignorance and give yourself away. I should"——

The big man rushed at him with uplifted fist, but the thin man dodged again and went outside and stood by the door and made a mental computation of the number of snowflakes which fell on the soil of New Jersey in the course of the three winter months.—New York Sun.

On the Platform.

We had an hour to wait at a railroad junction in Louisiana, and four or five of us sat down in the shade on the edge of the platform and hung our legs over. It was very comfortable, and we were smoking and talking, when a man with a rope in his hand, evidently looking for a stray mule, came out of the bushes opposite us and stood looking up and down the track. By and by he directed his gaze toward our feet, but we didn't mind him until he drawled out:

"You all, there!"

"Well?" queried one.

"Hist up yer feet!"

We "histed" without waiting to ask why, and then looked over to see a rattle snake about seven feet long just coiling himself for a strike after having crawled out from under the platform. A handy grindstone was dropped down on him, and when some one thanked the native he called back:

"Some men who hev lost a mule and hunted fer him three days would hev bin onery about it, but that's nothin' dog gone mean about me."—Detroit Free Press.

His Occupation.

PROSPECT ENTERPRISE

The Union Elevator Company Organized at Prospect.

Prospect citizens are just now considerably interested in an enterprise that promises to play an important part in the grain and milling business of that part of the county. A joint stock company has been organized and incorporated under the laws of the state, to be known as the Union Elevator Co. The capital stock is to consist of 120 shares or more and each member of the company is limited to one share. Sixty shares are already taken, and the Gast Bros' elevator has been purchased.

The organization of the company has been effected by the election of the following board of Directors: E. K. Herbster, Bryan Maloney, David Kyle, John Fleming, E. Hecker, L. D. Hashberger and R. Davids. E. K. Herbster was elected president, [illegible] Gast secretary and Jacob Moore treasurer.

Aside from the grain business the company proposes to purchase the Wottring Flouring Mills of Prospect and will operate them after putting in the roller process and all latest equipments. The stockholders of the company number a great many of the prominent farmers of that part of the county, and there is no doubt of the success of the company.

THE MALLEABLE STRIKERS

About Thirteen Moulders Quit Work—The Reason Is Not Clearly Stated.

A small strike occurred at the Malleable Iron Co's works Tuesday morning about 10 o'clock. About thirteen moulders—all but three—employed at the institution went out and refused to return to work. The cause of the strike is said to be directly caused by the discharge of Foreman Hess by Manager Jacoby. No complaint was made to Jacoby in regard to the discharge, so it is stated.

It is difficult to obtain any definite information in regard to the trouble, as no one interested has anything to say on the subject. However, it is known that there has been some ill-feeling against the manager and one moulder stated to the STAR that they would have gone out before had everything been favorable. The Board of Directors held a meeting Tuesday evening, but what was done is not known.

The men are still out today, and but three moulders, who did not join the strikers, are at work.

THE RAWLINS BILL.

Local Manufacturers Will Lobby Against Its Passage.

The Rawlins bill, which is now pending passage in the state senate, has excited considerable interest throughout the state, and manufacturers are working to prevent its passage, if possible. A meeting of Marion manufacturers was held Monday evening and the action of the measure discussed. Those present at the meeting represented the manufacturing interests of this city pretty generally. The opinion was unanimous that the bill should be defeated.

The directors of the board of trade also held a meeting for the same purpose Tuesday evening, at which the bill was again discussed. Resolutions were adopted and forwarded to Senator Pumphrey, from this district, asking him to use his influence against the passage of the bill, and setting forth the reasons therefor. J. J. Hopkins and J. J. Hane were appointed as a committee to go to Columbus and lobby against the bill.

This is an opportunity such as is seldom offered to the the people of Marion.

The opera selected and the cast will be made public tomorrow.
